

Danielle Türkow

Danielle is the Founder and Executive Director of Think-Film Impact Production. The company is a product of her original ideas, vision and leadership. She forged the business from nothing, and in just over five years has brought in contracts with Oscar-nominated and Emmy-winning films, partnered with some of the most well-known production companies and arts/policy influencers in the world, achieved hugely influential real-world change and built a strong, close-knit staff team that is equipped and empowered to implement the company vision and continue to grow and shape it into the future.

Danielle's film credits include Oscar-nominated and Emmy-winning feature "The Cave" (Feras Fayyad, "Last Man in Aleppo"), Oscar-shortlisted and Emmy-nominated "My Enemy, My Brother" (Ann Shin 2015 short & 2017 feature), Award-winning documentary "iHuman" (Tonje Hessen Schei), BAFTA nominated Director's "Eminent Monsters" (Stephen Bennett) and multiple award-winning docu-fiction "La Soledad" (Jorge Thielen Armand).

Before founding Think-Film, Danielle worked within the highest levels of creative policy strategy in President Martin Schulz' Cabinet in the EU among other Presidents thereafter as well as members of parliament across the EU. She spearheaded many projects on radicalisation, minority rights and women's empowerment with Nobel Peace Prize Winner Nadia Murad. Danielle continued this approach when founding Think-Film. Born out of frustration with the slow-moving nature of political institutions and a desire to explore how films and other creative visual media could help bring high-level stakeholders together in dynamic new ways, energise conversations on social justice issues and drive forward action-oriented exchanges that deliver real, measurable results for people on the ground. She has extensive experience driving dynamic and imaginative campaigns that take film and other creative arts projects to new levels of engagement and impact, and in connecting together stakeholders with the power to deliver change and adding financial value to the industry.